BROADMOOR HOSPITAL SELECTS STANLEY SECURITY SOLUTIONS

Indianapolis, IN – April 27, 2005 - Stanley Security Solutions, a provider of access control and security systems, today announced it has won an order to install its Minder® Staff Protection System at the world famous Broadmoor Hospital. The hospital, which houses approximately 400 patients that require a specialized level of security, is one of three High Security Hospitals in England known as the Special Hospitals. The contract was initiated and finalized through Stanley Security Solution's Blick Communications division.

The Minder Staff Protection System is widely used in psychiatric intensive care units, mental health hospitals as well as youthful offender establishments and prisons. Hospital staff carry a small mobile device, which functions as both an alarm transmitter and a radio pager. When an alarm is activated, all or a select group of devices are called and the location of the alarm displayed on their Minder® mobiles.

The Minder® system is acknowledged as one of the most sophisticated staff attack alert systems on the market and is the first choice for the highest risk establishments in the UK. The control equipment at Broadmoor Hospital has been completely duplicated to ensure that the hospital is never without its Staff Protection System.

The system introduction occurs in the wake of the Tilt Report, a high-level government analysis issued in 2000, which recommended all three Special Hospitals install personal alarm systems. The first Special Hospital to order a system was Rampton Hospital in 2001. The Minder® System has become the largest Staff Protection System in the world, with over 1,300 Minder® mobiles and 1,700 location beacons.

“Among the trends we are witnessing within the security industry is an increasing demand for security and access control solutions in key vertical markets, particularly the healthcare sector,” said Justin Boswell, president of Stanley Security Solutions. “The Broadmoor Hospital installation is a clear indicator of that demand, particularly with regard to the scale of the installation. We are committed to broadening our focus to any and all target markets that require an advanced, integrated, comprehensive and cost effective security solution.”
