Stanley Security Solutions has recently opened a Middle East office in Dubai, to meet the increasing need for innovative and durable solutions for building access and security needs across the Gulf countries.

The UK-based company is a leading provider of access and security products and services for the commercial, industrial, governmental and institutional markets.

"Buildings are springing up – seemingly overnight – across the region and contractors are looking for reliable, innovative, yet mechanically superior architectural ironmongery," says Robert Keil, vice president and managing director of Stanley Security Solutions Middle East.

"With a heritage rooted in quality craftsmanship, Stanley Security Solutions offers customers high-performing locks and architectural, commercial and industrial hardware products, based on extensive research and development and quality control investment," he adds.

From its new regional headquarters in Dubai, Stanley Security Solutions provides an extensive array of products, including locks and door hardware as part of its mechanical access solutions line. This is produced by several divisions, offering customers best-of-breed access solutions, including:

- Best Access Systems, which provides sophisticated mechanical access solutions featuring the interchangeable core and master key system;
- Precision Hardware, which manufactures panic and fire exit hardware products that are well-known for their ability to withstand the most abusive applications;
- Sargent and Greenleaf, a subsidiary of Stanley Security Solutions, which is a leading manufacturer of medium and high-security locks and locking systems, providing security solutions to financial institutions, commercial businesses, governments, and consumers around the world; and
- Stanley Hardware Group, which provides a wide range of security solutions from hinges with multiple mounting options to special application products.

A regionally-based warehouse also enables the company to provide enhanced customer service and quick turnaround time.

"While we are well-known as a manufacturer of quality locks and door hardware, automatic doors, electronic security products and tools, our success is in large part is based on the dealers around the globe whom we train and work with to service our customers better. Customers who understand our commitment to quality, ROI (return on investment), and lower TCO (total cost of ownership), benefit from the support of dealers who are just as committed to on-time deliveries, flawless installations and post-sale service," adds Keil.

Stanley Security Solutions locks and hardware product range are just part of a line of offerings, supported by an extensive field organisation. The company's continuum of products and services comprises another distinct "solutions-based platform," with its own proficiencies, recognised product brands and specialised expertise.

Stanley Security Solutions Convergent Security Systems offers integrated products, systems and services that provide efficient solutions for complex, IT-based security applications.

Products offered through this line include electronic access control, digital surveillance, data and network electronics, database integration, enterprise management, fire detection and alarm systems, intercommunication systems, media retrieval and distribution and professional sound systems, slide and swing door systems, healthcare door systems, integrated security solutions, advanced currency handling systems, automated teller machines, revolving door systems, specialty and customer-designed products and bi-fold door systems, customised security integration and service for correctional facilities, time and attendance, paging and parking systems and security integration and communication systems.
